4 ARRESTED IN RAID OF BIG STILLS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—Despite Henry Ford's claim that absence of the Blue Eagle has not hurt his business, it appears that he did not relish his role of recalcitrance.

Through private emissaries recently he has made several secret overtures for an invitation from President Roosevelt to come to the White House and talk things over.

In this way he would save his face amid a fanfare of publicity. F. D. R., however, has remained cool and aloof. He sent word to the auto magnate that he had nothing to say to him, but if he wanted to call, he would, of course, be glad to see him. But the President is issuing no invitation to Henry Ford. If Ford comes to Washington it will have to be strictly on his own initiative.

There is a great deal of misapprehension about Ford's status as regards the auto code. Despite his refusal to sign he is much under its jurisdiction as those manufacturers who did. The code covers the entire automobile industry, signers as well as non-signers. Every plant must abide by its terms and requirements; those who violate them in any particular are subject to prosecution.

The big distinction between signers and non-signers is that only the former may fly the Blue Eagle, thus signifying their public support of the President's recovery program, as well as the government's stamp of approval on their products.

BROKEN RECORD
It was by sheer accident that two American Marines were landed on Cuban soil the other day. Although withdrawn immediately, they broke the record of Ambassadors Welles in keeping Cuba completely free of American influence.

3 ARRESTED IN RAID OF BIG STILLS

OAKLAND, Sept. 27.—UP—Three elaborate stills, each 50 feet in height and extending upward through three stories of a warehouse were found by police here tonight.

Bert Isahia, Oakland, Joseph Ramponi, San Jose, Alfred Meda, Benicia and Henry S. Muszio, Modesto, allegedly found at the plant were held for questioning by federal agents.

The elaborate plant, which cost an estimated $100,000, apparently was raised before it went into operation.

Some 50,000 gallons of molasses and mash were found in three new redwood tanks.

The plant, with miles of pipes and with retorts and condensers, on the second and third floors of the stills, had a capacity of 100,000 gallons a day.

Police Patrolman Otto Ensdoll, who went to investigate a flashing light, innocently discovered the plant. He arrested the men.

The plant, one block from the Golden West brewery, apparently was located there so fumes would not seem unusual, police said.

Federal agents tonight were questioning the four prisoners in an effort to learn the names of the men who invested a tenth of a million dollars in an alcohol plant with repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment by Christmas inevitable.

SENATORS HAVE BATTING EDGE
FOR 'SERIOUS'

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—UP—The hero of the world series, as far as the New York Giants are concerned, may be that bearded old fellow handicapping Washington Senators in the outfield—Father Time.

While Washington has a distinct outfield batting edge, two of the New York picket men, Leftfielder Jim Moore and Rightfielder Mel Ott, are considerably younger than their respective Washington opponents, Heinie Manush and Goose Goslin.

Age is of paramount importance in defense garden play and both Moore and Ott are more capable of the "old college try" that has decided so many classics. In addition, Centerfielder George Davis of the Giants, although bearing the same 29 years as his opponent, Fred Schulte, is speedier than Washington's 200 pound center picket.

Here's the way the regulars line up in age and batting marks:

GIANTS:
Joe Moore, 25—292, Left field.
George Davis, 29—263, Center field.

Mel Ott, 24—283, Right field.

SENATORS:
Heinie Manush, 32—332, Left field.

Fred Schulte, 29—297, Center field.

Goose Goslin, 33—289, Right field.

At the right field post, stocky, hard hitting, riflearmed Ott should turn in all round better performance than Goslin. This includes batting. Goslin's season advantage of six points over Ott in batting does not tell the story of their ability at the plate. Ott is far and more dangerous hitter now. He has driven in 103 runs to 59 for the Goose. Of course Mel's fourth place in the batting order, gives him a slight advantage over Goslin, who is in second position.

Centerfielder Schulte, of the Senators has a .334 batting average over Goslin. Davis is speedier. Schulte probably will stand up better under more serious pressure and he is more experienced. Schulte has the distinct edge on this post.

Similarly, burly Heinie Manush, one of baseball's mightiest batsmen, has a .410 advantage over Moore, who is playing his first season as a regular. Moore is not a heavy hitter, but he is dangerous because of the accuracy with which he punches short singles through the infield. His hefty opponent from Alabama was the first big leaguer to turn in 200 hits this season.

Outfield reserves stack up as follows:

GIANTS:
Homer Peel, 31—242.
Lefty O'Doul, 36—254.

SENATORS:
Dave Harris, 30—278.
Sam Rice, 41—275.

Water Problem Is Discussed By R. P. Easley

PITTSBURG, Sept. 27.—R. P. Easley, former assemblyman from this district, was the speaker of the evening at a dinner meeting of eastern Contra Costa county chambers of commerce here to-night.

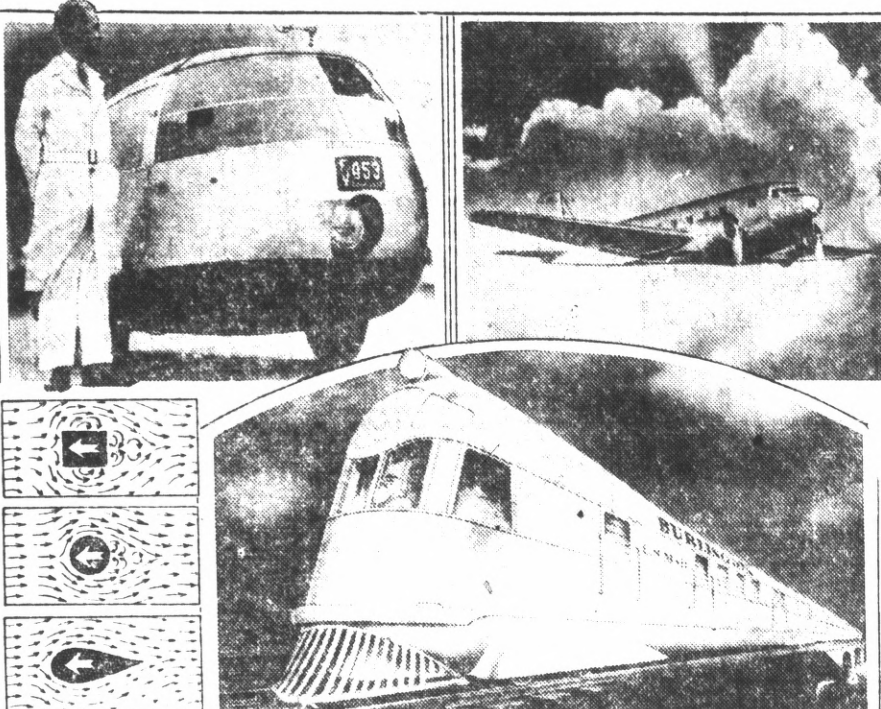

Easley, recently named chief engineer for the Salt Water Barrier association, explained the $170,000,000 statewide water conservation project.

The meeting was attended by representatives of Pittsburg, Antioch and other East Contra Costa chambers.

Code Violation Operator Fined

RIVERSIDE, Sept. 26.—Found guilty of selling gasoline under the posted price, the Riverside Petroleum company was fined $200 today by Justice of the Peace Moore in a case initiated by NRA code supporters. The station owners were charged with violating the rebate sections of the State recovery act, which serves as an enforcement measure for the national recovery act and codes signed under it.

'NEW DEAL' IN TRANSPORTATION BRINGS AIR SPEEDS TO EARTH

WHILE the Blue Eagle of the NRA is busy these days forwarding a new industrial era, science, calling for a "new deal" in transportation to meet the accelerated pace, is bringing air speeds down to earth. Hide-bound conservatives may stick to their conviction that air travel has its hazards, but with engineers now adapting the streamline principle of airplane design to boats, railroad trains and motor cars, ordinary citizens soon will be seeing the country at a speed of nearly two miles a minute whether from a transcontinental air liner or the cushions of modern earthbound speedsters. Ordinary citizens, statesmen, baby chicks, grocery orders and spare parts will go whisking along the surface of the earth with almost the speed of the night air mail. Above left, a new tear drop, three-wheeled automobile capable of a speed of 120 miles an hour. Right, a new air transport, hailed as the latest achievement of streamlining in air planes, on its initial flight, it is used on one of the transcontinental air lines. Lower right, modern streamlined train now under construction at Philadelphia for a transcontinental railroad. It is expected to travel at a speed of 120 miles per hour. Lower left, blocks of wind used in actual wind tunnel tests, illustrating how streamlining lessens air resistance, greatly increasing speed, through elimination of back drafts and unnecessary air turbulence.

INDUSTRIAL HIGHWAY IS TO BE URGED

The county road program, involving construction of the new industrial highway, and to be completed in eight-mile strip connecting Willow Pass with Muir on the Franklin Canyon road, was mentioned at a conference at the Chamber of Commerce.

The discussion was on record as favoring the whole program, which is to be a companion to being about construction at the earliest moment.

This was the decision yesterday of the directors of the Chamber of Commerce, following a meeting of the traffic committee which was attended by county officials and others. The committee, of which W. W. Scott is chairman, had a complete discussion of the county road program, and voted that the city of Richmond should be on record with all its force for the new industrial highway. The road would follow a route somewhat in line with the present Franklin Canyon road and would eliminate the large number of sharp turns and grade crossings which now act as a barrier to traffic from the east end of the county to Sacramento or Yuba City. The road is fully committed to the construction of the road, including the eight-mile strip between Willow Pass and Muir, and he will ask the supervisors to arrange an early conference with directors of the State Highway Commission at which early building of the new road will be urged. The favorable resolution by the Chamber will be followed by one from the municipality of Richmond and another by the county board of supervisors. The proposed highway is one part of a great highway plan by which it is hoped a new industrial road will run from the San Joaquin-Sacramento Delta county line through Richmond, Berkeley and Oakland and on to San Jose, providing a modern outlet for the products of the two valleys through this region.

JAPS PLAN TO SEND ARMY TO CAPTURE CITY

TOKIO, (Thursday) Sept. 28.—UP—Rumors that Japan planned to send troops to occupy the north China cities of Peiping and Tientsin was made today by the government.

Competent observers believed Japan would prefer to cooperate with the Peking government in ousting Fang Chen-Wu, the 'Christian general' from the position he had taken in north China.

Such cooperation, in foreign General Fang from the district, observers said, would be in the spirit of the Tansu truce, under which Japanese soldiers last May withdrew from north China to Manchuria.

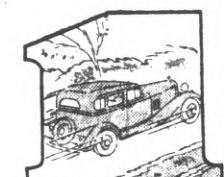

It was recalled that the Peking government was tacitly pledged to cooperate with Japan in maintaining order in north China. Japan, under the truce, agreed not to extend its operations beyond the great wall unless a case of utmost necessity arose.

Chinese troops which cause disorder along the great wall were as much the enemies of Peking as of Japan, government leaders here said privately. They held such armed groups must be either dissolved or annihilated.

Responsibility for the break has been placed upon the commander of the destroyer Fred J. Talbot, lying in Puerto Padre harbor. He put the Marines ashore when the yacht club was reported to be in danger. Apparently it wasn't.

Ambassador Welles was much provoked. Two Marines in the minds of some Latin Americans, are as good as a regiment.

THE ANSWER
Oklahoma's tall, dapper Senator Elmer Thomas, tireless inflation advocate, has a pet illustration he invariably uncorks when proselytizing for greenbacks. He pulled it on U. S. Treasurer William A. Julian the other day.

"Mr. Julian," demanded Thomas, "do you know what the total compound interest would amount to today if Abraham Lincoln had financed the Civil War by 5 per cent bonds instead of the $450,000,000 in greenbacks he issued?"

"Yes," replied Julian. "I know the answer to that one. The interest would amount to eleven billion dollars, one half of the present national debt. Now let me show you something."

Whereupon Julian pulled from his billfold a $5 note of the Civil War issue. Thomas offered to buy it at Julian's price, but it was not for sale.

WARNING
The Federal Home Loan Bank Board is quietly taking steps to crack down on certain lawyers who seek to exact fees from distressed home owners needing government loans—These petty chiselers are telling loan applicants they must have legal advice in preparing their papers.

Joe Eastman, dictator of railroads, who tells railroad presidents they're not worth nearly all of their salt.

BIG MUSICAL COMEDY AT THE FOX THEATER

"Moonlight and Pretzels" another of the new season's big screen hits will open at the Fox theater tomorrow.

Highlighted as the greatest musical smash romance of them all, the picture boasts of one of the finest casts of the season. A host of radio stars and screen stars as well as one hundred of Broadway's most beautiful girls are seen in the leading roles.

Eight hit songs are featured in this lavish musical romance composed by the leading tunesmiths of the nation. Among them are "Ah, But It's Love," "Gotta Get Up and Go to Work," "Are You Making Any Money," "Dusty Shoes" and "There's a Little Bit of You in Every Boy Song."

Moonlight for romance and pretzels for fun, is the significance of the title. Leo Carrillo, Roger Pryor, Mary Brian, Alexander Gray, Jack Donmy, Bobby Watson, The Four Ston Boys and William Miles are just a few of the great cast.

Dunn-Bennett Teller

James Dunn and Joan Bennett in "Arizona To Broadway" is the screen attraction at the Fox theater today. Herbert Mundin, Sammie John, Theodore von Eltz, and Mera Kennedy support the stars in this hilarious film romance.

Dunn has an entirely different role from that in which he has been seen lately, for he is a confidence man who double-crosses a bunch of crooks and then loses his heart to the girl. The picture, however, is devoted primarily to laughs.

HOLLYWOOD—UP—What the screen's handsomest actors believe constitutes beauty in a woman is often a far cry from the generally accepted views.

Out where the cameras roam, beauty is analyzed with the care a surgeon bestows upon an ill and wealthy patient. Beauty is so very important that producers, directors, leading men and writers all have their special ideas. And what are they?

"You can't set a standard for beauty in women," insists Lionel Barrymore. "It is a separate and individual problem. One woman with a badly shaped nose can make you think her marvelous just because she has a grand personality. If we could really put a finger on what beauty is or when it will arise, all its elusive charm would be gone."

Clark Gable believes "poise" counts more than any other quality.

"Good posture, a good walk, ability to sit and stand gracefully, all mean that an ordered mind and nervous system is behind the girl."

Installment buying is becoming popular in India.

Bob Howard, tennis sensation from California, and his doubles partner, Phil Morse, who are in the East for a series of tournaments, have an unpleasant clash with Cliff Garrison, veteran star. Later, at a party in Philadelphia, Cliff shows great interest in Marvel Richardson, an old friend of Bob's who is studying for the concert stage and has been engaged by the hostess, Mrs. Ellenber. Phil meets them on the lawn, thinks that Cliff has been annoying Marvel and, after heated words, knocks him down. Marvel, fearful of the consequences, pulls Phil out of sight around the side of the house.

CHAPTER XII

ONCE Phil and Marvel were safely around the side of the house and out of danger of being seen by the guests who had come running at the sound of the scuffle on the lawn, the girl stopped abruptly.

"On Phil, that was terrible!" she gasped. "Why did you do it?"

Phil opened his eyes in astonishment. "Why, he had been annoying you, hadn't he?"

For a moment there was silence between them while Marvel stood looking hum over her shoulder at head to foot in that aloof way of hers which she found unfailingly successful in crushing anyone who had made what she considered to be a malicious statement.

"Why are all men so silly?" she said disdainfully.

"But he was annoying you, wasn't he?"

"Suppose he was? Must all men think it necessary to punch somebody in the jaw at the slightest provocation? If you think it was annoying to me, how much more annoying it is that you should have knocked him down and I should have to drag you out of sight in order to prevent a free-for-all fight? I suppose that's your idea of civility. But it's not mine. I'm quite able to take care of myself, thank you. Most girls are these days."

He looked at her steadily. "In any event, I'm certainly not sorry I smashed him. I've been waiting for a chance to do it."

I thought as much. Your supposed rescue of me was just an excuse to hit a man you don't like when he wasn't expecting it. If you want to fight, why don't you fight fair?"

He looked at her in astonishment, then said slowly, "I'm surprised, but I suppose I shouldn't care. You've never liked me, have you?"

She laughed lightly. "If we're going to be candid, let's be candid. No, I never have liked you. I don't think I ever shall. I can't imagine for a single minute what you see in you."

"May I return the compliment?"

"My dear Marvel, you do sing beautifully, but outside of that, I'm sorry I interrupted your pleasant tete-a-tete with Cliff. You two must find so much in common."

"I suppose you'll run and tell Bob all about it," she sneered.

He laughed for the first time, but there was no happiness in the sound. "You are just the sort of person who would suppose that. But you're quite wrong. And now I suppose you'll go in and sing sweetly for Mrs. Ellenber?"

"And why shouldn't I? You don't suppose that your idiotic remarks have annoyed me?"

With that, she strode away, her head held high. As she returned to the ballroom, she wondered just what state of turmoil she would find there. But everything was running smoothly again, with the incident of Cliff's fall already almost forgotten and Cliff himself safely in his room.

Mrs. ELLENBER swept toward her with a smile and took both her hands. "My dear Miss Richardson, I was wondering if you would sing a very simple song for me, one I love very much."

"I should be delighted to, of course," Marvel replied.

They moved across the room and out into the entrance hall. Marvel was surprised as they continued on upstairs, and she wondered increased as they entered a small music room on the second floor. As she glanced around, she saw that, in spite of the grand piano, it could scarcely be called a music room, but rather a library equipped for music.

"You see," Mrs. Ellenber explained. "Mr. Ellenber is very ill and doesn't enjoy large entertainments. But he did hear your singing and was hoping you would sing just once more up here for us where he could hear you better."

There was a strange emotion in Mrs. Ellenber's voice which caused the girl to look around quickly. "Why, I'd be delighted to sing, but where is Mr. Ellenber?"

concerned" says Clark. "Fluffy, highly nervous women may be considered 'cute' but the term 'beauty' is reserved for the one who has full and graceful control of herself."

Beautiful lips, says Franchot Tone, are the most important element in creating an illusion of beauty.

"In talking pictures, the first focus of attention is always on the mouth of the speaker," declares Franchot, who has figured things out. "If a girl has harsh, unlovely lips, an unpleasant mental attitude is created which even a perfect figure, eyes and personality cannot undo."

Jewel Cabinet Won Him Job

HOLYOKE, Mass.—UP—Donat Nadeau, a woodchopper, fashioned an artistic jewel cabinet from 1,000 separate pieces of pine, requiring 100 hours to finish the article. He presented it to Mayor Henry J. Toepfer, who was so delighted that he secured Nadeau a job with a contracting firm.

Posse Hunts For Missing Ten Convicts

MICHIGAN CITY, Sept. 27 —UP— Fosses guarded towns and highways in northern Indiana tonight in the belief that ten escaped convicts would make another break for freedom and attempt to fight through the lines to Chicago.

Regular guards from the prison volunteer American Legion men, city firemen, state police, officers of other cities and farmers of several counties joined the groups which set out at 4 P. M. to guard every important town and arterial highway.

At Indianapolis, Governor McNutt ordered three companies of National Guardsmen to help hunt the escaped prisoners.

The ten convicts, most of them long term prisoners, escaped from the prison yesterday by use of trickery and violence. In escaping, they wounded three prison employees.

They also kidnaped two men—one of them Sheriff Charles Keel, of Harrison City.

Bay Bridge Spans To Be Completed

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 27 —UP— Early in 1924 the first tower of the suspension sector of the San Francisco-Oakland bay bridge will appear on the skyline, Chief Engineer C. H. Purcell estimated today.

"All the towers should be completed by the end of 1935," he said. "Cable spinning will also be started in 1935. By January, 1937, the bridge may be open to the public."

He pointed out the bridge involved the largest bore tunnel in the world through Yerba Buena Island, and two types of bridge—suspension and cantilever.

Famous Old Hall Here Is Wrecked

The Stiefvater building on the west side, one of the oldest landmarks in the city, is being wrecked. The building, which at one time served as a fraternal meeting place, was built about 1900.

The building was first a two story affair, but later was enlarged to three stories.

RICHMOND TO MAKE FIGHT FOR RELIEF

Support and cooperation for Fred D. Parr in his battle over the terminal rate case were pledged yesterday by the Chamber of Commerce directors at their luncheon meeting at Hotel Carquinez. A formal resolution again placed the organization on record as the time approaches for the oral arguments dealing with the question of rehearing before the Railroad commission. This will be held next Tuesday.

Markell C. Baer, attorney for the Port of Oakland, in a brief to the Railroad Commission in the case, opposing the rehearing, said "We do not think the people of Richmond, were they to understand the facts, would support the plea of the Parr-Richmond Terminal company any more than would the people of any other community around the bay."

This statement was vigorously assailed by T. M. Carlson, city attorney of Richmond at the Chamber meeting, and he asked the passage of resolutions putting the Chamber on record in support of Parr in the case.

"Mr. Baer takes in entirely too much territory in his statement," said Carlson. "I feel that the statement is an unwarranted attempt to discredit Mr. Parr and his corporation before the railroad commission. I feel the Chamber should unconditionally endorse the stand taken by the Parr company, as I believe it will be impossible for the company to secure an equitable share of the commerce of San Francisco if it is compelled by order of the Railroad Commission to charge rates identical with those in effect at other terminals more centrally located and served by large volume of controlled tonnage."

The case hinged on Parr's practice of allowing shippers to unload their own cars and pay for these charges themselves instead of making a fixed charge for this work at the terminal. The commission ruled Parr should discontinue the practice, and in his plea for a ruling he declared that other terminals around the bay are permitted procedure.

Attorney T. H. DeMay on record in favor of giving to the Parr company in the coming rehearing session the commission.

The directors unanimously resolved that the Parr company should have the fullest possible support, and placed the organization on record in believing that the railroad commission order is unjust and discriminatory and unless modified will result in irreparable injury to the city of Richmond.

Murderer Not Seriously Hurt

OAKLAND, Sept. 27 —UP— William Wallace, 29-year-old steamship steward from Los Angeles recovering after a gunshot wound today after he allegedly had killed Roy Newstrom, a taxi driver in a reign of terror that ended when he wounded himself.

A note found today, signed by Wallace, said he had decided to be "Judge, jury and all" in dealing with his estranged wife.

The bullet that wounded Wallace did not inflict a serious injury, doctors said today.

Your Good HEALTH

By CLAUD N. CHRISMAN, M.D.

Constant Vigilance Will Help to Prevent Ill Health

A GREAT many persons ask me the question, "What is intestinal intoxication?" I often wonder why it is so much easier to ask questions than to answer them.

Limit oneself to just one source of infection and intoxication.

THE name indicates a poisoning of the blood stream and consequently all the organs and tissues of the body from toxins or poisons generated in the intestinal canal. The intestinal canal is over twenty feet long. It curls and twists, gets kninked, and each coil is leaped over the other so many times that we wonder how it keeps from getting all tangled up. The inner lining is a soft, spongy, absorbing surface with many light folds and crevices.

AT THE point where the large and small bowels join together there is a narrow place with quite a sharp kink. Then the large bowels have a sharp angular turn up under the right side of the lower ribs and then another on the left side. As it crosses from the right to the left side it is always straight while we are lying down but when we stand up it loops down, sometimes almost to the pelvis and drags the stomach and other loose tissues with it.

CONSEQUENTLY we have numerous places where food can be detained and obstructed until fermentation and decay can take place. Then our food contains so many bacteria or germs, some of which are beneficial to us and some harmful. If we are taking plenty of physical exercise and are constantly bending and twisting the trunk, there is not much chance for stagnation. When we sit at a desk or bridge table, or at a picture show or sewing circle we do not aid our interestingly much in carrying the digesting food along, so it stops for awhile. The more frequently it stops the more chance it has to multiply the bacteria.

THE intestinal walls are supplied with blood vessels and lymph glands for the free and unobstructed absorption of the food that we have eaten. It also absorbs bacteria and poisons just as freely as it does the food. Intestinal toxemia is primarily due to a stasis, or stoppage of the intestinal contents. It may be very slight at first and no appreciable harm done, but as this stagnation increases, substances are left along the walls and gradually the amount becomes excessive. The muscle walls lose their elasticity, they cease to squirm and contract and push the food along. Each little stagnant point adds to another point and we slowly but surely absorb poisons and toxins from the foods that were intended to build us up and carry on successful living processes.

IT IS usually a slow accumulation almost entirely due to our laziness and carelessness. As these poisons accumulate in the system we grow sluggish, have dull headaches and dull backaches. We have no ambition, our joints hurt, mouth has a bad taste, we may become fat or lose weight and become anemic. We are all run down and the world looks very dull and blue. Rheumatism adds to our misery and life loses its interest.

THE remedy is to remove the cause. Cease to put in so much food, use more fluids, exercise, work. Laxatives or laxative food must be taken and we must keep at it. It takes a long time to acquire the condition and almost as long to recover. "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," in health as in anything else.

Making Spanish Fish

Either haddock or cod fish may be used for Spanish fish. Shred enough fish to make a cup. Place in layers in a buttered baking dish with two cups of diced boiled potatoes and one-half cup chopped pimientos. Season each layer with salt and pepper. When filled pour one cup of tomato sauce over the potatoes and fish and cover with a layer of bread crumbs. Dot with butter and bake until brown.

QUIET NERVES ARE ESSENTIAL TO AID BEAUTY

By JACQUELINE HUNT

IN ALL this talk about staying young and lovely through the years, we have almost overlooked the most important thing—steady, released nerves. Do you know that you can make your own wrinkles? You can wrinkle them in your own face by the strain and hurry and confusion of living. It is not your fault—entirely.

You came into the world a tiny bundle of nerves that screamed and kicked at the bright lights, loud noises and uncomfortable clothes until your mother did something about them. Now you have gotten over that long ago and you probably think that such things no longer disturb you, but they do. The only difference is that your reactions are more restrained.

All day long your nerves cry out at alarm clocks, jangling doorbells, the traffic in the street and the tension for working at a high speed. It is no wonder that you must frown and squint and set your jaws grimly. And that makes wrinkles.

You can learn some valuable lessons in the art of relaxation from your pets. Watch your puppy go to sleep. See how he lets his head drop down to his chest and his little paws stretch and snuggle until it finds a comfortable position and then it melts down into voluptuous ease that means release of every nerve and muscle.

Try the same trick when you go to bed at night or when you can find time for a nap during the day. Start with your legs, raise one straight up into the air and then let it drop down to the floor. Raise your arms toward the ceiling and let them flop down any old way, as if they didn't belong to you. Raise your head and peep down to see if your toes are still there, then let it sink back on your pillow. And now if you don't go to sleep in spite of yourself, repeat the exercises.

If you are troubled with insomnia, remember that your bed may be to blame. A good bed is one in which you can lie down in comfort, one that is soft enough to yield to the pressure of your body, yet firm enough to give you support. A good mattress is a beauty and health investment when you are in a room that can be completely darkened and well away from the noises of the street and rest of the house.

Another menace to healthy nerves is feet that are constantly annoying you. Choose your shoes carefully and be sure that they fit. The best shoes may cost a little more than you wish to pay, but they will last longer, you will feel better and your face will be fresher and happier. And you can well afford to pamper your feet a bit.

Before you go to bed at night, wash around your feet with bare feet, first on your tiptoes and then on your heels with your toes sticking up in the air. Practice walking along the edge of a rug, or down a crack, placing each foot exactly in front of the other. These extremely simple exercises call into play muscles that normally are strained or used and so become weak and useless.

And my dears, I've discovered the grandest thing to do with that last bit of cold cream, or hand lotion, or skin tonic that always remains in the old container when you have just replenished your supply. Use it on your feet. A cold cream rub before you take your bath and wash them, will give your feet a luxurious feeling that they will remember for several days. Tonic or hand lotion helps keep their skin smooth and free from callouses or blemishes.

Rest and a foot comfort will do more than anything else to prevent nerve irritation and keep your face free from lines.

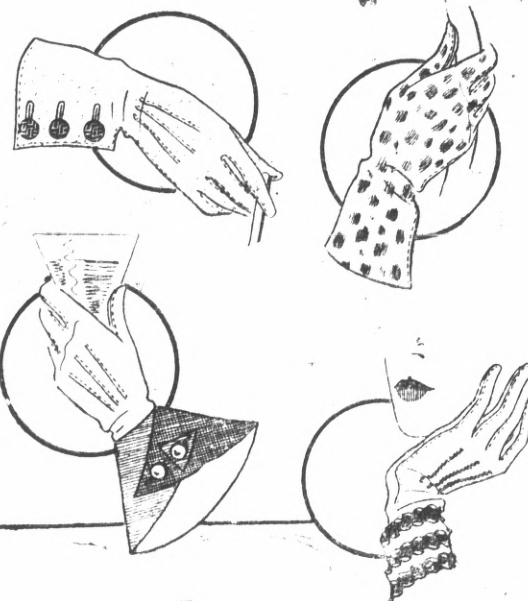

MODES AND MANNERS

QUESTION: "I am presenting my picture to a young man with whom I go steadily. We are very close. Can you suggest an appropriate and novel way to autograph it? Please place your answer in the newspaper early as I promised the picture soon. Thank you. BABS."

ANSWER: This is such a personal matter, that it makes it hard to give advice. How do you sign yourself when you write to this young man? "Sincerely?" "Affectionately?" "With Love?" "Fondly?" Why not inscribe the same closing on the photograph, and sign your name below? In any case, be brief. The inscription should not detract from the photograph.

The braided leather button is shown in the upper left hand corner, done in plaid of natural color with brown buttons.

Simulated novelty skins such as is interpreted in the New York market in fabric "alligator" or "lizards" appears here in the leopard skin effect which is worked out on leather in the upper right hand.

Three colors are used in the wide cuff glove at the lower left, two shades appearing in the pull-through buttoned cuff, and the third and lightest in the glove and the cuff lining. The buttons are metal.

The fourth glove uses the hand showing which is a feature of current footwear detail; it is in white with black bands which are worked in by white leather thongs.

New York—In London sports-wear showings, from which we often take our cue, ribbed jerseys emerges as the biggest fashion news in fabrics. Nubby tweed surfaces that are rough and decided in their appeal for country wear are used in jerseys for shirts to wear with skirts.

Separate skirts, to be completed by sweaters, blouses or separate jackets, are other favorites of the by-gone days that have made a successful comeback.

Sports Colors Red and green gain in sports-wear color. Dark greens as blouses, mossy greens, and metallic bronze tones are much liked. The rust red which sports-wear houses like is called zinnia. Brown, first choice for volume, shows, preferably in shirtings and liquor or sherry tones.

It is pleasant to find the coat dress, a fall perennial, quite frequently abandoning its role of the older, conservative woman's staple and having its shoulders lifted.

Erset Collars Eret or fence collars are highly regarded in autumn collections of daytime fashion. The collars in the fabric agree with the dress, also in a contrasting fabric, as for example, satin on lightweight woolen or on crepe and again in fur, with ermine the important pelt, sometimes terminating in tails.

Necklines which fastened high to come in a cool, care style are held by a brooch or clip, and dressed with draped necklines in the V-neck manner frequently have a brooch or clip holding the drape. These are either of diamonds or of brilliant set in real jewelry fashion, or of mirror glass, this last taking a big jump forward in vogue.

Premier Manuel Azana Of Spain ... A Dictator With Tied Hands

PREMIER MANUEL AZANA, considered by many as Spain's dictator, is in reality only a strong governor, successful in various enterprises which he has undertaken, and with sufficient insight to see that it is useless to try to do certain other things which are on his program.

The great work of Premier Azana in the first few days of the Spanish Republic was the putting into effect of the military reforms which had been already approved on paper by the "revolutionary committee," which subsequently became the "Provisional Government of the Republic." Much had been planned for various other ministries, such as Agrarian Reform, for example, but when the Republic was proclaimed most of the program, with the exception of the War Department reforms, was postponed until after the Cortes, or governing body, met.

Azana's achievements since his elevation to the premiership on October 14, 1931, include: First, keeping the Republic from being overthrown. Secondly, solving the religious problem in accordance with the laic Republican program. Thirdly, granting a semi-autonomous regime to Catalonia, thus removing one of the biggest thorns in the flesh of previous Spanish governments.

If Azana were the dictator he is credited with being, undoubtedly the list of his achievements would run to a much greater length. But the trouble is that the Spanish Premier is the leader of a relatively young political party, the Accion Republicana, which he and some friends founded in 1924, and which today has only thirty seats in the Cortes of 400 deputies. Azana's majority in Parliament is due, above everything else, to the support of the Socialists (110 votes), Radical-Socialists (55 votes), and the Catalan Left Party (35 votes), plus that of a few independents.

As a result of the fact that the Cortes is derived mostly from the Socialists, the Premier has had to bow to the wishes of this party in at least one important aspect, and that is, in delaying the adoption of the "Law of Incompatibilities." It was one of the Premier's ambitions to purge Spanish public life of what some say is a taint, namely, that one person can hold not only one, but two, and in some cases many, remunerative government positions, and at the same time be a member of the Cortes.

The "Law of Incompatibilities" was drafted to clear this up. When it was reported out of the committee and brought before the Cortes, all of it was quickly adopted except Article No. 5, which Azana himself objected to, for he wished this article to be made more severe. It was therefore sent back to committee. The committee invited the Premier to appear before it for testimony. The Azana announced he did not have time to appear, but the only real explanation for pigeon-holing the "Law of Incompatibilities" is that the Socialists are opposed to it. The Socialists, through the newspaper, El Socialista, have been the only ones to complain against it. Azana is definitely committed to the law, but for reasons which are evident, he dared not go ahead with his program.

Another occasion when Premier Azana found his hands tied, this time by the Radical-Socialist element, was his plan for the Federation of Left Parties. Just before the Cortes met in October, 1932, Azana made a speech in Santander, in which he advocated a fusion of the Republican parties of the Left, so that they might have a majority in the Parliament, and form a government without the Socialists, and without the necessity of new elections. Azana personally desired that the Radical Party, headed by Alejandro Lerroux, be included in the Federation. But the Radical-Socialists hate the Radicals, and are, on the other hand, strong advocates of the continuance of the Socialists in the government.

The result is that the Socialists did not leave the cabinet in January, 1933, and that the Federation of Left Parties has been organized, but comprises only Radical-Socialists, Accion Republicana, Catalan Left and Galician Republicans totaling only 130 votes.

Don't Use Old Iodine

Iodine should not be used when it has been kept for any length of time. This is because the alcohol in which iodine is dissolved evaporates rapidly and the tincture thus becomes concentrated and the strength is increased. It is best to buy iodine in small quantities and to use it sparingly.

SLIM WAISTLINE CAUSES REVIVAL OF THE CORSET

By MARIAN MAYS MARTIN

WHO remembers when the bright band of her best beau's hat made a belt, and when it chanced to be too small they were terribly chagrined?

Well, even if you don't remember it, or won't admit remembering it, it was nevertheless so.

Now we read an interview with the head of a big corset concern, who says that the average waistline for women of today is 30 inches. "But why bring this up?" you may ask. "Isn't it subject better ignored? Possibly yes, but, you see, we are confronted with the hour glass silhouette and are even now all a-kia over Lady Loft and the West fashions, which means a waist that needs restraint."

SAYS our authority on corsets: "There is only one way the hour-glass figure can be attained, and that is with the old-fashioned back-lace corset which few women, comparatively very few, wear today. And then they do not draw the waistline in to hour-glass proportions. The average waistline today is around 30 inches. I doubt whether any woman will stand the discomfort of tight-lacing to attain a slim 23-inch waistline," the factor said.

WELL, we would like to wager that the gentleman is wrong. Women are just foolish enough to yank in their waists and by so doing impair their health for no better cause than "they are doing it." It will not be done overnight, of course, but inch by inch the waistline will retreat, if the silhouette happens to look chic to us.

AFTER all, we are not all tenacious champions or channel swimmers, besides which, the gods of the fashions and goddesses ruling the fashion world have been kind and very helpful in building out our shoulders and doing little things here and there to give the waistline the appearance of shrinking, even though, by actual measurement, we may not actually have done so.

THERE is certainly nothing new in being corseted. Some 4,000 years ago we have reason to suppose that the ladies of Crete went the hour glass figure even one better. The oldest illustration of an actual corset dates back to 1043, and it was made, we would have you know, by none other than a monk. The reason for his designing it is obscure. It might easily have been to ridicule the fashions of the moment, always a popular indoor sport among men, or perhaps as a warning to his sex that a slender waist was a sinister enticement.

ALL one needs to do is conjure up mental pictures of Catherine de Medici, who, historians say, was imprisoned in a "close-fitting fortress" and whose waist, like most of the grand ladies of that elegant period, measured somewhere around 13 inches. Queen Elizabeth, for all her great qualities as a ruler, was also "measured in a steel drum," although her waist measured more than 13 inches. The "wasplike" waist is no new mode or mode of torture. French corsets in the time of Louis XIV laced both front and back.

WE HAVE it on good authority that, even in our present day, the Italian peasant wears, under her crude corset, a flat piece of wood known as a busk. This flattens out her tummy and gives what is considered, in her native Italy, a fashionable figure. This busk, by the way, is quite an old idea.

WE NEED go no further back than our own Gibson Girl to realize what women will endure for the sake of being in fashion. At the beginning of the present century, corsets were accepted as a matter of course and little girls were accustomed to them via the Ferris wheel route. The donning of one's first real corset was a great day in the life of any girl.

DEPLORE the return of the restricted figure if you like, after all it is only history repeating itself. Other generations survived, and it is to be assumed this one will, although it is to be hoped that we will not be called upon to endure the tortures about which our mothers used to tell. It is, however, not likely. There has been tremendous improvement in the modern corsets—not to mention some mental development on the part of women—since the beginning of the Gibson Girl era.

Tasty Dishes for Today

OYSTERS NOW ARE IN SEASON

By JUDITH WILSON

OYSTERS come as a reminder that the summer is almost gone. For the past week now, this luscious, easily digested shellfish has been dragged from its shallow, briny beds to appear in your own fish market, fresh and delicate. The weekend hostess or the homemaker can make no better choice than to serve oysters either as an appetizer, soup, or entree.

Oyster Cocktail As a cocktail to tickle the palate of your dinner guests you can serve this dainty bivalve on the half-shell, six or seven arranged around a small dish of pungent sauce on a bed of cracked ice. If you cannot get the oysters on the half-shell, then serve them in glass cocktail cups marinated in a lemon-flavored catsup made hot and snappy by the addition of a few drops of tabasco and a teaspoon or two of grated horseradish.

Oysters a la Creole For the main dish in the first menu, wash one cup of rice through in a saucpan of rapidly boiling water, add one teaspoon salt, boil until tender, but do not let it break. Then drain it off through a colander, wash well under stream of boiling water and leave in colander over boiling water until needed.

Melt four tablespoons of butter in a saucpan and add two teaspoons each of grated onion and apple, one tablespoon of flour and two teaspoons of curry powder. Stir over fire until four turns light brown color, then add one-half cup of strained oyster liquor and one-half cup of cream or milk. Stir over fire until sauce has thickened and boiled five minutes. Add two teaspoons of chutney and season the mixture; then add two or three dozen oysters and heat them in sauce until they plump up, but do not boil as it makes them leathery. Arrange some of the rice as flat border on hot dish. Mold remainder of rice in cups, then turn out this cavity with butter and arrange them on top of each little mound with thin strips of red pepper. Pile oysters and sauce in center of border, arranging four oysters. This makes eight to ten servings.

"Oysters in Steak"

Have you ever tried oysters in steak? Have the butcher cut a three inch thick slice of round steak, then have him cut a deep pocket in it with his sharp knife. Stuff this cavity with a dozen oysters from which the juice has been drained and fasten the edges of the openings with skewers or a needle and thread. Dot the steak thickly with butter and brown quickly under your broiler flame. Turn and do the same to the other side. Then reduce the heat and roast the steak for a half hour or so. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and dot with more butter. Serve very hot with green peas and boiled potatoes.

Home-Making

By ALINE STERN

If you have an invalid to feed who likes fried eggs, or a child, try adding a tablespoonful of water to the butter, allowing it to come to a boil before adding the egg. The edges will not crisp nor brown. The egg will have the appearance of a fried egg, at the same time retaining much of the digestibility of the "boiled" egg.

To make baked beef tender, add a teaspoonful of vinegar to the water in which it is being cooked. Likewise a dash of vinegar added to the pot of any meat which promises to be tough, or proves tough after cooking an hour or so, will make it tender. Vinegar will not destroy the flavor. If anything, it usually improves it.

When gardening or scrubbing, pack soap under finger nails, or use soap white, to keep out dirt.

A combination of cream cheese and butter, half and half, reduced to a paste is an excellent sandwich base. Add jelly, nuts or olives, and there you are.

When planning cold drinks, don't forget lemons.

You and Your Child

TRAINING CHILD TO MEET FOLKS

By JANE HERBERT GOWARD

THE first time Betty came to visit Aunt Agnes, she was very quiet and all afternoon her mother made apologies for her silence. Just before going home, she did warm up a bit. But the visit was brought suddenly to a close and Aunt Agnes and Betty didn't have a chance to get well acquainted that day. The second time they came, Aunt Agnes heard Betty's mother instruct her, in the following manner as she came to open the door: "Talk Betty. Now remember I want you to talk to Aunt Agnes this time." Betty came in. She stood stock still before Aunt Agnes. "My brother has a new suit and a new pair of shoes. I have new shoes too, but this dress is last year's," she said.

MRS. GOWARD

Social Handicap Betty said the first thing that popped into her head. Then she found herself a seat in a corner and was even less sociable than she had been on her first visit. If her mother hadn't coached her in the hall, I am sure she would have behaved differently. The visit would have started off naturally at any rate. She would have answered Aunt Agnes' hello shyly no doubt, and may have continued to show reticence until she grew accustomed to the surroundings again. But it wouldn't have taken as long the second time as the first, under normal conditions.

Consider Child's Comfort Children are much happier in the society of their contemporaries than with adults. Adults are a totally different species of human being. It is hard to get used to them at best—even if they are one's parents sometimes. A child gets along with grown folk to the same extent that he is made to feel at ease with them. If they talk sense to him, and do not appear flustered, bored or embarrassed, he will answer politely. But many adults cannot disguise their embarrassment in the presence of children; and hoping to please the parents they attempt to play with the children or they tease them. This makes the situation uncomfortable all around. Such adult insincerity is what spoils children and leads them to show off.

Did You Know?

When making starch, if a small piece of lard is dissolved in it, then the hot iron will not stick.

Lettuce will keep crisp for two days if a half lemon is placed on the same dish—amid the leaves for preference.

LOOTERS AT TAMPICO ARE EXECUTED

TAMPICO, Mex., Sept. 27.—UP—Damage in the hurricane and flood which devastated this port and nearby towns on Sunday night and Monday was estimated today at upwards of 200,000,000 pesos ($47,000,000).

Secretary of the Interior Eduardo Vasconcelos arrived to take charge of relief work. He sought to check on the dead and injured, but it was feared it would be days before an official casualty list would be forthcoming, due to difficulty of communications with the stricken interior.

At least 200 were believed dead. The secretary, who flew here by plane, brought four physicians and a new supply of medicine badly needed by Red Cross workers who aided the injured in roughly set up temporary hospitals.

The secretary sent the plane up again, loaded with food and medicine to fly over small farms in the flooded districts inland, dropping supplies if unable to land. The area, first aided was that flooded by the Panuco and Tamez rivers.

There has been no contact with these districts for days, and the damage and loss of life was feared high. The rivers were reported still rising.

There was a lessening danger in Tampico of a food shortage. Communications were restored and ships arrived with supplies. Sections of the railways, however, will take weeks to repair, it was believed. The storm washed out miles of track.

All classes of society contributed to a general relief fund started by the federal authorities. The national lottery will donate entire proceeds of the next drawing to local relief. Clubs and newspapers have started funds.

The first executions of looters at Tampico occurred this morning when two men caught in the act were shot by military authorities. The water situation was reported becoming acute, water being sold by the bucket.

The United Press correspondent stood by the river today and saw 30 bodies floating out to sea.

An official estimate said 14,000 persons were homeless in the Tampico district.

The military authorities reported one American casualty—the wife of an American resident of

Bride Shoots Record Moose

SEWARD, Alaska, Sept. 27.—UP—A giant Kenai moose with an antler spread of 67 inches tonight was added to the collection of Mrs. Robert F. Welsh, 19 year old bride of a Philadelphia broker, evidence of her prowess as a big game hunter.

Besides the moose, Mrs. Welsh also killed a black bear, coyotes, and a large mountain ram. She was accompanied by her husband, a world traveler and hunter, and an Alaskan guide, Frank Towle. The moose was one of the largest killed in this district and undoubtedly one of the largest ever killed by a woman, hunters said.

Claiborne, Oakland attorney, on a charge of conspiracy to violate the Federal bankruptcy statutes by concealing assets, was sentenced to a year in the county jail today by Federal Judge Frank Kerrigan when he pleaded guilty.

Floyd's attorney pleaded for leniency on the ground his client had aided the prosecution of Claiborne. Claiborne was recently sentenced to five years in Federal prison. Harold J. MAY RAISE ANTI JEWISH TRADE BAN

BERLIN, Sept. 27.—UP—Intimation that the anti-Jewish boycott in Germany might be partially lifted was seen today in a ruling by the ministry of economics that discrimination between Aryan and non-Aryan business firms was "insupportable."

This ruling, opposed to those teachings of the Hitlerite creed designed to exterminate Jews as a controlling influence in the Reich, said:

"Such discrimination with the purpose of boycotting non-Aryan firms inevitably must lead to disturbances. Such a program of economic reconstruction will react unfavorably on the labor market. There is no grounds for proceeding against any firm as long as the proprietor does not violate the law or the merchant's code of honor."

The decree, issued by economics Minister Schmitt, while in a certain measure expressing his personal convictions, was not in harmonious with the views of a certain important section of the Nazi party, in contrast with that of another section which maintains that Jews must be "fronted out" of the economic world and professional life.

His declaration is the frankest in the government has made in a acknowledgement that any member has made in a long time on the usefulness of Jews in commercial life. Many quarters, however, were highly skeptical of the extent to which it might be put into practice, and what weight it would carry among the rank and file of small Nazi retailers who are as insistent as ever that Jewish competition must be eliminated.

A Nazi spokesman remarked to the United Press recently: "We intend to remove Jews from positions of power and control in professional, commercial and banking life, but we have no objection to their earning a living in lesser positions."

The Schmitt ruling, however, was significantly followed by a statement from the Nazi Labor administration offices in the Rhineland, issued as a "last warning" and threatening police measures unless agitation for a boycott of department stores ceased immediately.

The administrator cited a decree of July 7 prohibiting concealed or open war against department stores—many of them Jewish owned—and said that both he and Schmitt had been bombarded with demands that the boycott measures be prohibited in fact.

The boycott activity includes such acts as placarding and distributing leaflets against the stores and the refusal of newspapers to accept advertisements of certain stores, drawing up lists of approved and disapproved stores.

The move was seen primarily as evidence of the concern with which more conservative Nazis face the increasingly radical demands of certain subordinates, especially the outlying against department stores which bear a Jewish stigma despite the fact not all are Jewish owned. The small shopkeepers are particularly bitter against the big stores, whom they charge with throttling the "little men."

Gold Receipts On Increase, Says Reports

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 27.—UP—Gold mining continued to look up in San Francisco today, with reports from the U. S. Mint of continued gains in receipts, and action of Idaho Maryland Consolidated in increasing its dividend. Idaho-Maryland directors declared a dividend of three cents a share, payable October 15 to stock of record September 30. The last dividend, paid in July, was two cents a share.

Officials said a larger payment could have been made, but that it was thought advisable to build up a surplus in view of expansion activities.

The company has added 100 men since the world price for gold was made available in the United States. The dividend represented around $51,000 on the 1,701,000 shares of outstanding stock.

Recovery this year is running about the same as in 1932, it was learned, but the higher gold price is making greater returns.

Deliveries of new gold to the mint in the last few days reached an indicated rate of about 180,000 troy ounces a month. Mining men here expected that a 200,000-a-month level would be attained before long if the gold premium holds.

July deliveries were around 135,000 troy ounces.

Under the old United States price, the monthly turn-in would be valued at around $3,700,000. The world price, now available, makes the total around $5,500,000 a month. In the first full week the world price was available, delivery was 3,069 ounces a day, compared to 4,476 ounces a day last week.

ed ransom bills. This discovery opened a new vista in solving the crime. Memphis agents arrested Langford Ramsey, an attorney and former brother-in-law of Kelly.

Chief John M. Keith of the Chicago division of investigation said Ramsey confessed Kelly sent him to the Coleman farm to get part of the ransom money. Upon his return he was arrested. Keith said Kelly's share was $73,000.

MEMPHIS, Sept. 27.—UP—Fear that an attempt may be made to liberate George "Machine Gun" Kelly, accused of a part in the Urschel kidnaping at Oklahoma City, caused the government to instruct today that the desperado be manacled hand and foot in his Memphis cell. The gangster snarled as the chains were clamped to his wrists and ankles.

"The killed five men at Kansas City," officers said, "and we are determined that this shall not happen again."

Special patrols were placed on every road leading into the city and all suspicious automobiles were searched.
